

MERCHANT MARINE FORMS BASIS FOR ADDRESS BEFORE ROTARY CLUB BY ROBERT MORRIS, WHO IS LOCAL MANAGER OF BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY

Speaker Became Interested in Amateur Radio at Age of 14—
With Pal Rigged Up Radio Telephone Which Was Believed First Ever Built in Ohio

Speaker at the weekly meeting of Bristol Rotary Club today was Robert Morris, local manager of the Bell Telephone Company.

Mr. Morris' address, a most instructive one, was eagerly listened to by the Rotarians. The address follows:

At the tender age of 14 I became interested somehow in amateur radio. In 1920 another boy and myself rigged up a radio telephone which we believe was the first ever built in Ohio. We tried to imitate the American Telephone and Telegraph station at Deal Beach, N. J., but our meagre equipment was only sufficient to carry across the street where a group of learned professors marveled one night at the strains of "Dardanella" coming out of the air. Listening to the dots and dashes of the ships on the Great Lakes whetted my imagination so I studied a whole year on code and radio theory and took a civil service examination for a commercial radio operator first class. I promptly flunked the "exam" but tried again three months later, this time fortified with more knowledge and my first pair of long trousers, which I convinced my mother were necessary for a commercial radio operator to have. The second attempt proved successful and during summer vacation I got a job on a small Lake Erie passenger ship running between Cleveland and Detroit. This, I thought, certainly, was going to sea.

Later I worked on other ships and by the end of the summer had been on nearly all the passenger ships on Lake Erie. Next summer a fine job on an ore carrier took me all over the Lakes, Duluth, Fort William, Chicago, Buffalo, etc.

During the next fall I listened to the signals of the ships at sea on a much improved receiving set and my imagination got away from me again. The signals of ships in the Caribbean reporting cargoes of fruit, and the ships off Cape Race giving location of icebergs, sounding in dots and dashes in a tiny pair of ear phones late at night was too much to sit at home and listen to in a little attic room so I studied hard again and graduated from high school a half year early so I could get out to sea in a hurry.

My family, with tears in their eyes, finally let me go to New Orleans, the night of graduation. There I got my first taste of rooming-house life (of which I've seen much since), and didn't like it. I felt in with a nice old Southern family, and also with a lot of cock-roaches. I'd never seen that kind of an insect before.

The first job on salt water was on a passenger ship plying between New Orleans and Havana. The next was on an old freighter that waited in New Orleans so long I got tired waiting for her to move, and took another job on a banana boat. It's a good thing I got off that freighter for she carried a cargo of arms to a revolutionary force in Vera Cruz, was captured, burned and her crew thrown in jail. One time I relayed a message from a camp at Braganza's Bluff, Nicaragua, where we had stopped for mahogany, to the United States Fruit station at Swan Island in the Caribbean for transmission to the State Department at Washington. The contents were such that when we got to Honduras some official who had listened to the message decided that I knew too much about a revolutionary plot to let me go to the next port, La Ceiba, Honduras, so he started trotting me off to jail, but on our way up town he found he had lost his job and decided not only to let me free but to go with me to La Ceiba and join the opposing forces. Later, we sailed to Vera Cruz and one night while I was ashore the ship sailed without me. My money was gone, so were my clothes and the ship, and Vera Cruz is no place for a bum. The telegraph lines had been down for a week so there was nothing to do but get a job with a gang of Jamaica sailors on the next ship bound for New Orleans. That was enough of the Gulf and Caribbean so I went over to Florida on a sea-going tug and then sailed for Europe on a large freighter belonging to the U. S. Shipping Board carrying lumber. After a few trips a good job opened up on an oil tanker running from Texas City to Hamburg. We ran into the worst storm on that trip I have ever seen. The seas came over the whole vessel, carrying away all the life-boats and leaving gaping holes where the davits had pulled out of the deck over our cabins. An Italian freighter sank near us but we had no chance to answer the call for help, we had all we could do to keep afloat and could make no progress against the storm, in fact after 24 hours of it we were ten miles back of where we had first encountered it.

A year later I found that my escapes from jails were not to be confined to Central America. We had stopped at Borneo for fuel oil, the ship was anchored out in the harbor and as I was returning to it before sailing I rowed too near a pipe line system, where one of my majesty's servants decided I might pick up too much information about the submarine oil piping system. Proving my innocence took up quite a time and (Continued on Page 3)

LANGHORNE'S PRISONERS MAY BE SENT HERE

Justice Objects to Charging Rental for Use of Cell

CHARGE NOW 50 CENTS

Bristol may be called upon to house Langhorne's prisoners, according to Justice of the Peace J. Norman Moore.

Langhorne, it appears, charges 50 cents a day rental to all prisoners held in its two-cell lock-up in the town hall in that Borough.

Informed by a constable he was apposed to assess a prisoner 50 cents because he had been a day in the borough jail, Justice of the Peace J. Norman Moore was astonished, but in inquiry disclosed that there is an ordinance to that effect. After writing to Burgess George C. Mather and Borough Council President Frank Osborne that the ordinance should be rescinded, Moore said:

"It isn't fair to the prisoner. I fine a man and he is unable to pay the money. He must stay in the lock-up to wait transportation to the Bucks County Jail in Doylestown. It may be two days before he will be taken away. Is it fair to charge him for rental in the jail here?"

"And, furthermore, in which the rental fee is included, Bucks County has to pay the money, adding more expense to taxpayers."

Moore also pointed out that Langhorne needs a new jail. The borough, he asserted, obtains enough revenue from taxes to construct such a building.

If the Borough Council insists on maintaining the ordinance, he continued, he will send prisoners to South Langhorne, Morrisville, or Bristol, because there is no rental for prisoners in the jails in these towns.

LIGHTS, TREES, LAUREL DECORATE MILL STREET

Merchants May Plan Some Sort of Public Celebration
During Next Week

A FINE HOLIDAY SPIRIT

"Best Wishes" for the Christmastide from Mill Street Business Men's Association are to be literally written along Mill street. The language to be used includes "characters" of lights, evergreens, rope laurel.

The lights will keep in the minds of the Christmas throngs the "Light of the World," birth of Whom Christmas honors; while the symbol of life eternal in the form of the evergreen will be much in evidence.

There are to be many ropes of varicolored lights strung across Mill street, and the poles from which these are suspended will be artistically draped with rope laurel. Then the 60 Christmas trees, which are planned for, will be arranged near the curb line on either side of the street. These will be attractively trimmed.

This decoration plan of lights, trees and laurel, will form a bower of Christmas beauty beneath which the holiday crowd of shoppers will mill, inspecting in the many stores of that thoroughfare the Yuletide gift goods displayed by the merchants.

It is planned to have the lights burning some time next week, many of the strands already being in place. Charles Rathke is in charge of this work.

Within a few days the trees will be in place and the laurel put in position. And here is a possibility—the merchants plan a meeting, probably this afternoon or tomorrow, and at that time they will consider some form of public celebration to occur when the colored lights first blaze forth.

Already have many of the progressive merchants caught the Christmas feeling, and have attractively trimmed their windows and interior of the stores. Holly, wreaths, poinsettias, miniature Christmas trees, sprigs of green, grace many a window; with cheery streamers wishing all "A Merry Christmas."

The Philadelphia Electric Company office on Radcliffe street, was one of the first to display Christmas trimmings this year. Early on Monday was the large structure dressed in attire of red and green, with strings of colored lights, garlands of laurel, and red wreaths and poinsettias.

The "fever" is spreading daily. Each day sees the number of decorated windows mount. The shoppers are increasing, and gaily go about their errands in the holly-trimmed shops.

Issue is taken with the State Highway Department by relatives of Walter Lewis Ross, Jr., Chestnut Hill, as to the responsibility for the crash of the bridge Sunday night which resulted in the death of Ross and the injuring of his wife.

The bridge on the Buck Road, leading from Newtown to Feasterville, collapsed with Ross' car, dropping it to the bottom of the creek. Mrs. Margaretta Sharpless Ross, the victim's widow, who was riding with him when their automobile was plunged into the creek, and Mrs. T. Wilson Sharpless, mother of Mrs. Ross, of Chestnut Hill, joined in denying emphatically the charges of Samuel M. Lewis, Secretary of the Department.

The head of the highway department, in the official report of the investigation of the fatality, said that Ross' car had struck some of the side trusses and that had caused the collapse. If it had not struck these, he report said, "there would have been no mishap."

Mrs. Sharpless criticised Lewis' statement vigorously and placed the blame for the tragedy "upon the negligence of the State."

"My daughter said that she and Mr. Ross were nearly across the bridge when it collapsed," Mrs. Sharpless said. "They were driving very slowly and their car never touched the trusses at the side of the bridge."

"The responsibility for this accident rests entirely upon the negligence of the State. Suppose an automobile should strike the side of a bridge?"

If the bridge were properly designed and constructed, would that cause a collapse?"

Mrs. Ross, who escaped from the crash which killed her husband only slightly cut and bruised, said that her mother's views were her views in the matter.

Their expression of criticism against the State Department of Highways was borne out by a statement made by Stacy B. Brown, of Newtown, a Bucks county commissioner and the undertaker to whose mortuary Ross' body was taken after it had been extricated from beneath the mass of girders and timbers which had crushed the victim to death.

"Bucks county has many bridges of this type, and they are a danger to all forms of motor traffic, particularly trucks," Brown said. "Heavily loaded trucks pass over them during the night and weaken them."

Several independent investigations into collapse of the bridge which carried the Newtown-Feasterville road over the Neshauney near Holland were under way yesterday. The citizens of the vicinity were following these with interest because of the existence of fifteen bridges of a similar type in the county, it was said last night.

Residents of the section near the bridge said that many heavy vehicles have disregarded the warning signs which are posted at either entrance to the span and which specify the maximum load weight as 8000 pounds and the top speed at ten miles an hour.

Some sections of the bridge trusses it was said yesterday, are nearly 75 (Continued on Page 3)

ARREST FOUR MEN AND RECOVER LOOT HI-JACKED FROM AUTO TRUCK ON LINCOLN HIGHWAY, PENN VALLEY

Excellent Detective Work of Corporal Stewart and County
Detective Russo Rounds Up Ring of Alleged Hi-Jackers and Reveals Cache of Stolen Goods in Bensalem Twp.

Keen-eyed Bucks County Detective Russo and that vigilant member of the State Police, Corporal John Stewart, of Morrisville sub-station, by excellent detective work, recovered the loot hi-jacked from a truck and have under arrest four men, believed implicated in the theft. The stolen loot was valued at $12,000.

Those in custody:
Roy O'Warren, alias Roy B. Nuneviller, 1176 North 11th Street, Philadelphia;

Frank Konopka, Sr., and his two sons, Frank Konopka, Jr., and Walter Konopka, 2825 Clearfield Street, Philadelphia.

Yesterday morning Corporal Stewart and Russo began a search of all of the roads in lower Bucks county to get a trace of the spot where the stolen vehicle and its loot had been parked until the cargo had been unloaded. The truck belonged to Lewis Levine, Trenton, N. J. It was hi-jacked early Tuesday morning on the Lincoln Highway at Penn Valley.

The driver of the truck, John McNamara, 162 Cleveland avenue, Trenton, N. J., said that he had been held up by four men armed with guns. Two of the four took him into a sedan while the other two drove off with the truck. McNamara was driven to a spot near Newportville where he was thrown out. Late Tuesday afternoon the empty truck was found on the Humesville road by State Highway Motor Patrolmen.

Stewart and Russo in their search noticed an old barn on the Richlen road, Bensalem township, which had a corner knocked off as if it had been hit by a heavy machine. They entered and found piled in the center of the barn a great heap of merchandise, including silk, radio tubes and various other articles, taken from the Levine truck.

In the attic of the house they discovered O'Warren, who on questioning, is said to have admitted that he was one of the bandits, and that he had been left to guard the loot. He was arrested and taken to the Morrisville State Police Station. During a grilling there he named the three men whom he said were implicated with him, and told the address of a rooming house in Philadelphia where they might be found.

Troopers Fattrell and Greblunas were stationed at the barn, which is about five miles from the scene of the holdup, to await the possible return of the three men, while Stewart and Russo went to Philadelphia to look for them, armed with warrants charging robbery and carrying concealed weapons.

The three Philadelphia men were arrested at 1 o'clock this morning in their rooming house.

Mr. and Mrs. George Percy Douglass and daughter, Miss Lucille Douglass, of 2031 Wilson avenue, have sailed for London, England, where they will remain until February, visiting relatives.

Each student has heard the good Saint's bells ring, and the response is made more quickly than the summons to classes is answered. The spirit of Christmas is in the air!

The Christmas Spirit in the particular case in question first put the idea in the mind of Bernard Granoff, proprietor of Barney's Hardware Store, that idea grew and was spread to Superintendent Howard E. James of the Bristol schools, and on to the many hundred pupils in the several buildings.

The result is: Many an unfortunate tot is going to have some real Christmas joy, spread through means of bright-hued, sturdy toys.

Here's the plan the Yuletide Sprite unfolded to the man at Barney's, and how the idea spread like real Christmas-fire to many happy boys and girls who are going to be happier for their part in the whole scheme.

Mr. Granoff conceived the idea of refurbishing toys, for there are hundreds of them in every town that literally "go to waste" annually. Taking a large share of the responsibility, Mr. Granoff offered to donate paint, brushes, nails and other materials which he might have in his store and which might be used in making the toys like new.

The plan was placed before Mr. James who spread the news to the students. The pleased response was immediate. Toys began to pour into the several school rooms immediately, and even now there are dozens ready to be sent to the high school.

For it is at the high school that much of the work of refurbishing is to be done. There the art department under direction of Miss Edith Barnhardt; the home economics department, in charge of Mrs. Addie Culver; and the manual training department, with Elton Bird as director, will do much toward making the toys strong and glossy again.

The tasks will be done during the class periods of these departments as well as after school hours.

The idea, an excellent one, has taken root: the toys are pouring into the schools and Barney's Hardware Store; the paints, brushes, etc., are ready at Barney's. The pupils are enthused.

Mr. Granoff has also invited any organizations of the borough interested, to assist in the work, he planning to provide necessary tools and paint.

And then in just about three weeks—joy will be immeasurable, for the dolls, wagons, mechanical articles, soldiers, etc., will be distributed mainly by the Girl Reserves of the Bristol High School. The "re-newed," and "re-vitalized" articles will be placed in the hands of the little tots who attend the annual Christmas party of the Girl Reserves, and not a few will find their way into baskets to be sent to the tiny children in the homes where food is carried by the "Reserves."

From real, sacrificial and interesting giving acts, such as these come the true Christmas spirit and joy.

LENGTHENED DAYS

Concerted efforts of public and private health agencies may postpone death from 15 to 20 years, but this is not the same as assuring lengthening of the maximum of life. It means only that more people will live to maturity or come to ripeness of age.

Man's age has been lengthened an average of 18 years from the sixteenth century, when it was only 40. In 1875 it was 45 years and now it is 58. The progress made in the last half century has been both amazing and satisfying. But if the goal which medical men say is easily within reach is attained, the average person will live to the scriptural maximum of 70.

While the lengthening of the maximum age is not specifically promised, it is to be inferred; for if the average person is to reach the age of 70 the number living on into the eighties, nineties and past the century mark would increase proportionally.

However, this state of general longevity will not come by any natural process. First man and his science must learn how to avoid and cure the diseases which now prevent the average man from remaining more than 58 years in this life.

People today live 13 years longer than the average span of life in 1875 because infections and contagious diseases have been placed under control and the infant mortality rate has been greatly lowered. Surgery and medicine are a'so prolonging the lives of millions.

If the average man 50 years from now is to have the happy prospect of living to be 70, medical science must conquer those dread maladies of maturity, heart disease and cancer and apoplexy.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

Christmas entertainments, how the children enjoy them! What is it that makes their little entertainments so splendid? Their stage fright helps a little. The sea of heads in the audience confuses them and gives them stage fright, but whether they make perfect orations, or fail in the attempt, their baby faces creep into the hearts of the people and make them glad.

All the people love children always, and are especially tender towards them at Christmas time. This affection is born in all men. If it were not so the human race could not survive. So if they distinguish themselves in their recitations we love them, if they break down, we love them in their discomfiture. This is how the matter stands, and no mother need be ashamed of her boy because he fails in his "piece."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Beware a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

CHAPTER LVII

That second anonymous letter written as they knew now by Isham, had dropped an odd hint: That being that vaulted door they would have found the reason why his enemies had decided that Severn knew too much, had become dangerous to their safety.

And Isham had feared that these men might try to have a way cleared secretly to that door—no doubt to hide or remove something the vaults contained, make a danger-spot safe for themselves, whatever its secret could be, before the police could investigate.

CAPTURED

That thought suddenly suggested another. Had Isham whilst watching in the grounds been discovered and captured? Had perhaps never returned to his cottage at all—though he placed had evidently been searched by his enemies? Certainly it seemed as if his planned coup had miscarried.

And had Isham's fear been realized? Had these men already got that underground door cleared and opened?

"Think I'll go and have a look for myself," Bill decided, some little time after Jim and Webber had departed.

He walked over to Beggar's Court entering the grounds by the side gate, and made his way round by the ruins. His first glance inside was reassuring. The sunk flight of steps leading down to that door was still as he had seen it last, choked with great blocks of fallen masonry. Bill was conscious of a sense of relief as he walked on to the house.

Martin opened the door to him. The man seemed jumpy, all nerves, as Bill noticed.

"Yes, Mr. Sant is in, sir. He didn't go up to town today."

Just then Sant appeared in the hall.

"Hello, Grayson."

Sant was looking worried and haggard. His attempt at the old breezy manner seemed forced.

"Thought I'd just look in to ask if you'd heard the latest news," Bill said casually.

"No. What's that, my dear fellow? I've heard nothing, nothing whatever."

Sant tried to speak carelessly, but his manner gave him away. Like Martin, he was palpably all on edge.

"Well, rather a disturbing thing happened whilst Wynter and I were here last night. Two men broke into Manorways and frightened my wife and Miss Faring—"

"Good Lord, Grayson! No, I hadn't heard a thing about it, and I'm very sorry to hear it now. Burglars, of course? I hope they were caught?"

"No, got away—luckily with nothing of value. Not the only queer thing that happened in the village last night. Apparently Isham's disappeared. All the signs of a struggle in his cottage, his papers ransacked. Looks as if he'd been attacked and kidnapped."

Sant had given a palpable start.

"Kidnaped? Incredible! I can't believe it, Grayson," he cried.

His face was a picture of startled amazement. An uncommonly good actor, Sant, Bill reflected dryly. One could almost have believed from his expression that Sant had heard of Isham's disappearance for the first time now.

"Ask the police," returned Bill with a shrug, "they're at his place now. It's like Severn's case over again—and probably the same gang."

Bill did not stay more than ten minutes. Martin was in the hall, as if busy on household duties, as he and Sant passed over the man came quickly forward to give the departing visitor his hat. And as he did so a sudden instinct told Bill that for some reason Martin was desperately anxious to attract his attention unseen by Sant.

Quite unexpectedly an opportunity came. There was the sound of car wheels in the drive and Sant crossed to the window of the hall to glance out. Martin moved close to Bill and only the latter caught the nervous, almost inaudible whisper:

"Look inside your hat when you have gone."

With an almost imperceptible nod, Bill walked to the door.

"Well, good morning, Sant."

On the doorstep he met Martell, who had just got down from his car. Under pretext of being in a hurry Bill only exchanged a passing greeting and walked quickly up the drive.

"Look inside your hat!"

But not until he was out of range of the windows did Bill follow this unspoken injunction. Tucked inside the leather band was a scrap of paper on which these words were written:

"They're having the steps leading to the door of the vaults cleared to-night about 9, when they mean to destroy all evidence before the police can get their noses in."

Evidently Martin in his eagerness to save his own skin had gone over whole-heartedly to the other side.

This was important news. News to be telephoned to Haste, that the inspector might come prepared to cope with the situation.

About 4 o'clock that afternoon Haste turned up in Jim's car. A second car brought a couple of plain clothes men and Webber.

"As we passed through Trayne I called to see the police superintendent there—of course, I'm trespassing on his territory!" Haste told Bill with a laugh. "But I've made it all right with him."

He gave some instructions to his two subordinates, who went off with Webber.

TRAP

"Very useful information you had from this chap Martin, about that underground door. We shall let them go to the trouble of opening it—and then come on the scene!" Haste explained with a laugh.

Meanwhile his men would keep the place under observation as soon as it was dark, to give warning should operations commence earlier than expected.

"That letter from Isham which the assistant commissioner handed to me," Haste said as they went indoors, "contains more than enough to have justified our having that door opened—and this apparent kidnapping of him would certainly have decided us to do so in any case. However, they're saving us that trouble," and he chuckled. "Isham has been watching Sant and Martell for some time—and he's told us quite a lot about Martell, too, only under another name, a chap we've wanted. Well, I won't go into that now—but we aren't too proud to hand it to Isham for a pretty useful bit of work. And I only hope no harm's come to him."

"But that door in the vaults—" what's behind it?" cried Bill, "What is it they're so desperately keen to hide?"

"Cocaine," said Haste. "If Isham's right he's run to earth at eggars Court the distributing headquarters of a big organization for dope traffic. He says that underground place is full of the damned stuff."

So that was the guarded secret behind that door—cocaine? Dope picked up at sea a few miles out from vessels engaged in this foul, illicit traffic and run up the estuary in the fast motor boat to Beggar's Court.

It must have been this ugly secret that Frank Severn, on his unexpected return home, had stumbled upon—knowledge too dangerous for the safety of these men.

Inspector Haste, Jim and Bill Grayson sat in the boathouse at the bottom of the garden at Manorways as 6 o'clock approached, waiting for Martin, who was to come up by water from Beggar's Court. He was to bring them news of Severn. Would he also be able to give them a clue by which the missing man Isham might be traced. They were anxious about Isham.

Haste had told them a good deal about John Isham.

"American secret service. Came to England six or seven weeks ago, when he presented his credentials at Scotland Yard," Haste said. "Explained he was over here to trace a man believed to be in England whom the New York police wanted badly."

"Martell, of course."

Haste nodded.

"Martell and as we know now he's a man Scotland Yard's been wanting for a long time under another name. Of course, as is customary in such a case, we'd have placed any assistance necessary at his disposal, but Isham was damned independent. Preferred to work on his own. Said he'd trace his man, first get all the necessary evidence, before calling us in."

And Haste shrugged his shoulders.

"If he hadn't been so keen on playing a lone hand, maybe he wouldn't have been in the soup now!" he added. "I fancy some personal feeling entered into it, some private deadly grudge against this man, Martell, that made him keen to do the thing off his own bat. We didn't know how nearly through he was with his job or that he'd even traced his man until that letter of his today, with enough in it for us to have acted on even without what we've heard from you gentlemen."

What Haste had told them explained much that had puzzled them. But one thing still puzzled Bill.

"But I'll swear I saw this man Isham in Sing Sing within the past year—and I was told then he was in for life."

Inspector Haste laughed.

EXPLANATION

"Oh, you saw him in Sing Sing right enough! That was all arranged. It was necessary Isham should get in touch unsuspected with certain lags there who knew something and who wouldn't mind opening their mouths to a fellow lag—savvy? It was the evidence Isham got in Sing Sing that put him on the trail of Martell in England."

A distant church clock began to strike six.

Merchant Marine Forms Basis for Address

our ship was delayed. She blew the whistle for an hour and finally when I rowed alongside the captain told me that if it weren't one of the ship's own boats I had he would have sailed without me. I believe he would have, too. One time at Budge Budge, India, I met a Lord Sinnah, an Indian, who offered to get me a job as a telegraph operator way up inland. I would have had a house and five servants on a beautiful spot overlooking the Ganges, and with nothing to do but keep three Indian telegraph operators working. It looked mighty attractive then but I had in my pocket an application blank for entrance at Dartmouth College which my family had forwarded to me, and decided to fill that out instead.

I started out to find the merchant marine and tell I'm way off the subject so I'd like to go back a way to the history of our maritime experience.

During the Colonial period we laid the foundation for the finest merchant marine in the world. The timbers in New England proved to be excellent for ships and our Cape Cod fishermen were as fine a lot of sailors as could be found anywhere. Inter-communication between the colonies was easier by sea than by land, and with this impetus, the fishing industry to provide the sailors, and the woods of New England to make the vessels we had a keen maritime interest. The superiority of our ships was definitely proved in the war of 1812.

The reign of the American Clipper Ship in foreign trade was roughly between 1830 and 1890. We traded with the East in silks and spices; with Africa for slaves and ivory; with Australia for wool; with Europe in wheat, cotton, and raw products in exchange for manufactured goods. Then too our ships engaged in coastwise trade. Rice from Rangoon to Japan, the products of the East were carried to Europe, and so on. The fast American Clipper ship won a romantic place in history that will never be forgotten.

After the Civil War the iron steamship was found profitable and dependable on the sea. England with her iron industry, and knowledge of building machines soon excelled in building this type of ships. The steamers were faster and could be depended upon for regular sailings and arrivals where the sailing vessel would have to wait for winds. Also England had developed a vast colonial trade and was not content to have it carried in foreign bottoms.

After 1890 the sailing vessel had definitely been displaced by the steamer. England's trade with her colonies was increasing by leaps and bounds, her manufactured goods found a ready market in the colonies, and the raw products of her colonies found a ready market in England. We had no colonial trade, but found ourselves nearly a self-sufficient nation, independent of sea borne commerce, also our government was occupied with internal problems, the Western lands, silver, "trust busting," and so on. Shipping received little government aid. When the Panama Canal was opened a profitable inter-coastal trade was developed and the business was reserved for vessels flying the American flag. No foreign ship may carry coastwise or intercoastal freight or passengers between American ports.

When we entered the war we found ourselves without the ships necessary to carry our cargoes to Europe and without the shipyards to build them. The U. S. Shipping Board was then organized and the greatest ship-building program ever undertaken was started post-haste. You who lived here in Bristol know about that. The object of that great undertaking was well accomplished, over 1600 ships were put together at breakneck speed and most of them saw valuable service in the war. Since that time the best of them have been kept in service. In order to put them in private use the Shipping Board first operated them by its own management in order to create trade, later the Board rented them to private operators at low rentals, and finally sold them to the operators very cheaply.

Our merchant marine is on the upgrade. We are now building fine passenger ships on our own ways, several have just been launched at the Camden yards and at least two others are nearing completion. This country has developed and maintained inland waterways ever since 1820 and will continue to do so. An instance of government aid may also be found in the fact that 80 per cent of the cost of a new ship may be borrowed from the government by a shipbuilder at a very low rate of interest. Bristol found herself very much interested in shipping only a few years ago. Who knows but what at some future time we may be again interested in ships that go down to the sea.

years old, although the bridge whose span collapsed Sunday was built less than half a century ago.

Originally, at that point, a "camel back" type span was built about a century ago. Twenty-five years or so later the creek waters rose and swept away all bridges in the section. The present bridge then was constructed. The last bridge collapse in Bucks county was last summer when an old "camel back" broke down under the weight of a truck and precipitated the vehicle and its driver into the canal. The driver escaped unhurt.

There are 2800 bridges in the State highway system, it was explained in Harrisburg yesterday, and funds to rebuild all those which should be gone over are not available. Bridges are inspected annually, with more frequent examinations where necessary, it was said.

Mrs. Russel Frederick sent the card to her brother-in-law, Byron Frederick, while she was on her honeymoon.

NEAT CORSETING IS NOW ESSENTIAL WITH NEW WINTER FROCKS

Latest Models Have Straight Front With No Hard Boning

By Alice Langelier

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Dec. 3.—Neat corseting is called for by chic costumes coming out for smart winter wear. The slouchy, boyish figure of former years is a thing of the past.

Today's corsets, however, are a far cry from the famous "Old Ironsides" of the '60's and '70's, for one's own natural figure is what is being featured this season. It is straight in front with no hard bone and the material itself makes for grace and lovely carriage.

Natural-colored linen makes a new and charming corselette and another comes in English eyelet embroidery. Figured batiste makes a foundation for the older figure with back lacing combined with a patented inner lacing which can be adapted to the individual body.

Some of the French corset-makers are stressing the separate corset and brassiere, but one-piece garments are also shown and low-backed corsets for evening wear.

The very slim young thing may do with an elastic and batiste belt for daytime wear, but if her evening décolleté be of the latest fashion, the low-backed corset is necessary. Without following fashion too slavishly, one must none-the-less pay greatest attention to the detail and moulding of undergarments this season, perhaps more than ever before.

Louis Towner, of 806 Mansion street, was the guest of his aunt, Mrs. William King, of Locust street, Wednesday until Sunday.

MISS STEPHENSON IS FETED AT A SHOWER AT McDONALD HOME

Young Woman Surprised As She Reaches Scene of A Meeting

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Agnes Stephenson, of Jefferson avenue, at the home of Mrs. Carrie McDonald, of Swan street, on Tuesday evening. A paragon was suspended from the chandelier in the living room of the McDonald home and from this ribbons stretched to various parts of the house, each of which ended with a gift.

The surprised young woman, who thought she was attending a sewing circle meeting, was agreeably and delightfully surprised with her gifts. A pleasant evening was enjoyed and refreshments were served at the conclusion of the evening.

The participants included: the Misses Agnes, Emma and Rose Stephenson, Mrs. Granville Stephenson, Mrs. David Neill, Mrs. Alfred Marshall, and Miss Eleonora Breece, of Bristol; and Messrs. Walter Rutherford and Robert Weiser, of Doylestown.

THAT COATEES GO WITH ALL COSTUMES IS ECONOMY NOTE

Many Smart Women Have Half Dozen; Many Bright Colors Used

By Alice Langelier

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Dec. 3.—This is decidedly a "coatee winter," with cunning little coatees of every sort coming with nearly every frock and costume and doing their bit in the economy wave.

Many smart women have a half a dozen coatees for a black or all-white dinner or evening gown. The short velvet one with long sleeves is perhaps the most popular in white, salmon, bright turquoise, green or cherry-red. One in palest yellow ring velvet is three-quarter length and serves as a contrast to a black net dance frock and simple demi-toilette of the pale yellow velvet.

coatees come by way of an all-flame colored georgette frock with coatee of purple velvet. A jade-green satin has a pill-box red coat and a nasturtium printed crepe de chine goes with a slim coatee of Vandyke-brown angel's satin.

Old 19th century vivid gold colored velvet is allied to black and worn over black taffeta or faille. This is one of the season's combination revivals.

For the all-black dress that is in every woman's wardrobe there is a white velvet coatee or one in emerald or jade-green, another in pale apricot or a more vivid coral-red. To wear with the all-white satin or beige lace dress there is an unusual purple or mulberry tone which is handsome in velvet.

The glittering sequined coatee with short sleeves brightens up many a dull evening gown.

Believe 12 Deer Were Shot in Bucks County

At least 12 deer were shot in Bucks county Tuesday, reports from various sections of the county indicate. No serious gunning accidents were reported in the Bucks hunting grounds, but there was more shooting on the opening day of deer season in the Bucks county district than ever before.

John Thompson, of Point Pleasant, Clerk-elect of Orphans' Court, said that he heard more shooting in the Tinicum township section than ever before.

Mr. Thompson said that he heard of three deer being shot, but that in his opinion at least twelve were killed in Bucks county on the opening day.

Ed. Nace, of Point Pleasant, shot a deer in the Tinicum section. George Kilmer, of Point Pleasant, came home with a fine 8-prong buck, shot in Tinicum township, and Earl McCool, of Point Pleasant, shot a doe.

Constable Isaac Schaible and party, of Tinicum township, shot three deer yesterday not far from the homes of the various members of the party.

IN a specially constructed chamber, refrigerating apparatus, controlled by thermostats, duplicates the winter temperatures of your locality. Tests are made at driving temperatures as low as 20° below zero. The exact road performance of Mobilgas, under the different "engine heats" produced by these tests, is measured and recorded on the control panel by the most delicate instruments. With this exact knowledge, the specifications of Mobilgas are then pre-adjusted to provide Climatic-Control.

*CLIMATIC-CONTROL is the pre-adjustment of the specifications of Mobilgas so that it automatically adapts itself to the variations in "engine heat," even as high as 400° F., caused by changes in temperature, altitude, humidity and road "pull." In the Mobilgas Research Laboratories, all these changing climatic conditions have been "manufactured" in hot and cold testing-chambers. Here engine tests are conducted day after day. The road performance of Mobilgas is thus scientifically verified at different "engine heats," and its specifications are pre-adjusted before it is placed on sale in your locality.

TESTED in the laboratories in sub-zero temperatures, the actual starting qualities of Mobilgas are verified scientifically. So Mobilgas comes to your locality pre-adjusted to meet even the extremes of winter driving ... and at no increase in price. • The highest usable level of performance under all weather conditions! That is what Climatic-Control gives Mobilgas. And quick starting is an important part of that level. • Cold mornings and icy blasts affect the "engine heat" of your car. Your gasoline should adapt itself to "engine heat" changes. Mobilgas does this automatically through Climatic-Control. • Fill up today with Mobilgas and let your car decide. No extra cost!
